WIND RECORD FOR JULY 13

Nature continued providing unusual weather in the Chicago area yesterday with a cold wave which tied the record low temperature of 54 set in 1964. Even the high was low yesterday. It wasn't the lowest, but the high of 68 was the fourth lowest on record for a July 13. The lowest high (honest, that's what they call it) was 64 in 1926. Other low highs for the date were 65 in 1888, 67 in 1882 and 1928, and another 68 in 1883.

The official low of 54 was reached at Midway airport at midnight. It was 58 on the lakefront and 52 at O'Hare International airport. The cold was blamed on a large high pressure area blowing from—where else?—the north pole.

Where the mysterious East blends with the tastes of today.

AN OFFER TO ALASKA

November weather in Chicago has been cold and disagreeable this year. October wasn't much better. There was no Indian summer worth mentioning. The year's deficiency in temperature is more than 600 degrees.

Nature is plainly mixed up, because Alaskans are wondering why their weather has been so warm. Record-breaking high temperatures have been reported in that state almost daily since Nov. 13. Ice skaters and hockey players are unhappy. The ground is too soggy for moose hunters.

As the winter wears on, we'd be glad to share some of our cold with Alaska.
